A rich and fertile land, Salalah is the only region in the Gulf which receives the monsoon showers which fall from July to September. Situated in the extreme south of Oman, with a spread of beautiful, undulating carpet of green coconut groves which lace the coast line, where the clouds and mist shroud the mountains and springs and wells gush forth, Salalah is a place that attracts many migratory birds. Salalah town is the administrative capital and has all the modern amenities.

Salalah can be visited all year round, whether you seek a winter beach break or wish to explore the many sights around the town or choose to experience the monsoon season with the Khareef Festival. The town spreads along the coast with a long corniche popular for evening walks, where one can enjoy the cool sea breeze. The pace here is relatively slow and perfect for a languid, relaxed holiday interspersed with visits to some interesting places and perhaps an adventurous mountain trekking.

One of the popular spots for picnic is Ain Arzat which is a source of several natural springs.
